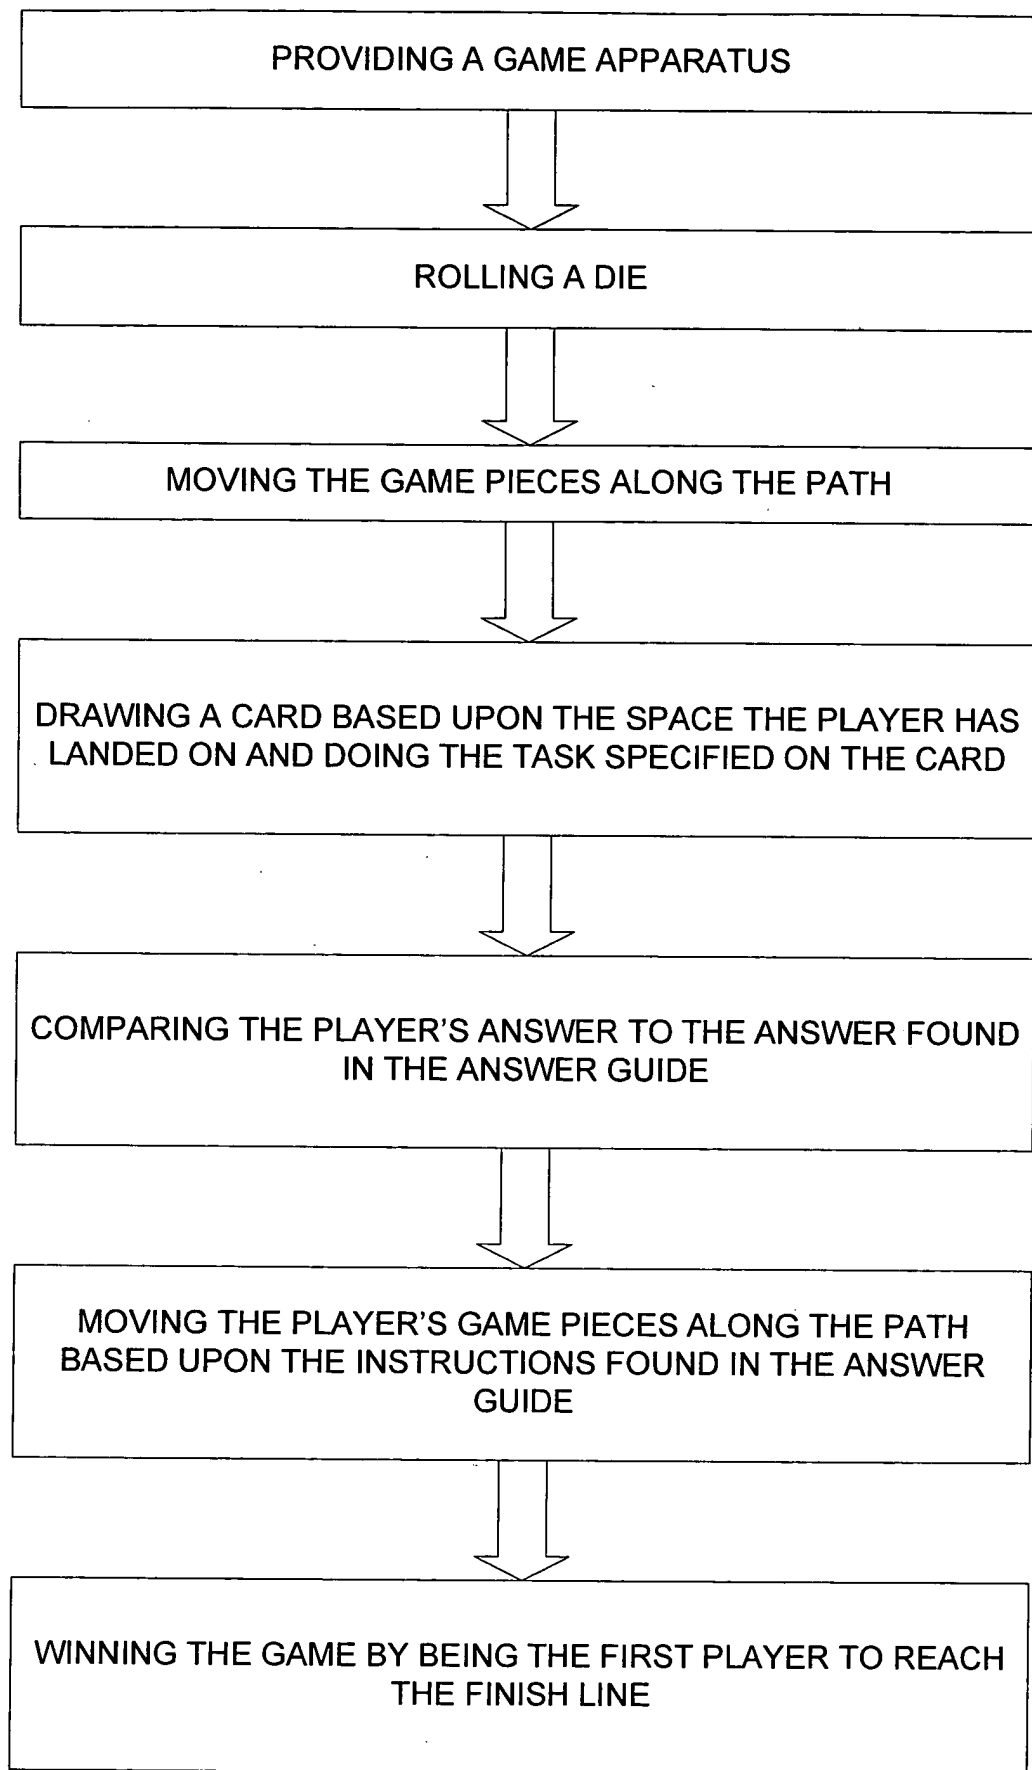

Fig. 3

1. You're dating a goat who has a kid from a previous marriage. You feel left out when the three of you are together. You resent having to share his attention.
- A. You give him an ultimatum: "It's me or it's your kid."
  - B. You make excuses not to be available when the kid is around.
  - C. You start looking around for a goat without kids.

2. Your goat enjoys keeping in touch with his ex-goatee. He's having lunch with her and you are feeling jealous. He insists that he and she are "just friends."
- A. You start calling your ex-goat for a lunch date. Two can play this game.
  - B. You suggest coming along for their next get together.
  - C. You accuse him of being emotionally involved with her.

3. It's been two years into the relationship and he hasn't given you an engagement ring. You're starting to wonder if you are wasting your time.
- A. You mention that your uncle is in the jewelry business and could get you a good deal on a nice engagement ring.
  - B. Ask him why he's dragging his feet. Be sure to hear what he says.
  - C. Let him know you are losing your patience and expect to be engaged by the end of the year or you'll have to move on.

1. You've given your business card to your goatee friend. A week later, her goat calls you for a date.
  - A. You are flattered that he went to such sneaky measures to get your number.
  - B. You realize he's a cheat and you give him the brush-off. Then you immediately call your friend to let her know.
  - C. You start seeing him discreetly and avoid your goatee friend.

2. Even though you know he has a serious relationship, you have fallen for his goatman charms. He calls you and propositions you for a three-way. You...
  - A. Act surprised but interested and ask him what exactly he had in mind.
  - B. Tell him how excited that makes you feel but would rather have him all to yourself.
  - C. Feel hurt butt will do anything to keep him interested.

3. He's dating you and her both. You keep hoping he will eventually love only you. Well, this night he stands you up.
  - A. You stay up all night calling the hospitals worried he was in a terrible car accident.
  - B. Your gut tells you he's with his other goatee, so you drive to his apartment looking for her car.
  - C. You leave a message on his voice mail, "Call me back only if you have a hospital bill. If not, consider us finished."

You are wildly attracted to your friend's goat. She goes out of town and you invite him over. You even took him to your bed for a romp in the hay. All the while, you rationalize to yourself that it's merely a physical experience and what your friend doesn't know won't hurt her.

You've been in a relationship for a year. During your last business trip, you enjoyed a night out with the other goatees. You met someone that you were attracted to and gave him your number. One evening you and your goat are having dinner at your place when suddenly "he" calls. Your goat asks who it was and you lie telling him it was only a "solicitor."

Why did your last relationship fail? Discuss your responsibility for it's failure. Tell the group how you made him look like the (scapegoat) bad goat.

Discuss your best first date and your worst first date.

Jealousy and possessiveness are both about control. One trait is a feeling of out of control and the other is the need to feel in control. Give an example of the last time you felt jealous and an example of how you acted possessive with your goat.

1. A. Ultimatums never work unless you plan to go to war. Pushing a parent to choose between you and his child would be a mistake. If he's weak and sends his own child away, he'll never forgive himself and eventually you will lose respect for him. In the meantime you are training yourself to become an evil step-parent. This man is a package that includes a child (whether you like it or not) so either accept the package or get out of the relationship.

GO BACK A SPACE.

1. B. This might work for a short time. However, you are avoiding dealing with the reality of the situation. What happens if you fall deeper in love and want to spend more time together?

STAY WHERE YOU ARE AND THINK ABOUT THIS.

1. c. This is probably the best choice for you. If you can't handle sharing your goat with his own child, then you definitely need to let this package go and move on before you get deeper involved.

MOVE UP ONE SPACE.

1. A. Goatgirl, get over yourself! If your ego needs that sort of a stroke, then you are a mess!!

1. B. Good idea to give him the brush-off. I'm not sure how your goatee friend will handle the phone call but at least you are clearing your slate of the dreaded goatman.

ADVANCE ONE SPACE.

1. C. Goatgirl, you are looking for big trouble! First of all, what sort of friend are you? Secondly, why would you want to sneak around for this cheater? There's nothing good going to come out of any relationship if you have to hide what you are doing. Are you really that desperate for a goat's attention.
